

Approved Workplace Rehabilitation Providers

A key feature of the Workers Compensation Act 1951 (the Act) is the focus on Injury Management. There are increased obligations for stakeholders specifically designed to assist the rehabilitation process of returning injured workers to suitable employment.

The primary focus of the injury management process is the involvement of all 3 key parties (the employer, injured worker and nominated treating doctor) in the management of the injury from the time of the accident to the return to work or settlement of a claim.

An approved Workplace Rehabilitation Provider provides, for an injured worker, an independent party to liaise and negotiates with everyone involved in the worker's rehabilitation.

Only approved workplace rehabilitation providers are eligible to provide vocational rehabilitation for the purposes of the Act.
