

1 October 2026

The Motor Accident Injuries Act 2019 (the MAI Act) and the Motor Accident Injuries (Premiums and Administration) Regulation 2019 (the Regulation) allow for the indexation of defined benefits being income replacement benefits, funeral and death benefits and quality of life benefits. In addition, quality of life damages, the excess payment for a WPI assessment and amounts for legal costs relating to external disputes and common law claims are also indexed. Benefits are adjusted to reflect movements in average weekly earnings (AWE) on either a biannual or annual basis. The series known as the Persons: full time adult total earnings series seasonally adjusted for the ACT, issued by the Australian Bureau of Statistics is used for these purposes.

The amounts used to calculate income replacement benefits are indexed biannually on 1 April and 1 October, commencing from 1 October 2020. All other amounts are indexed annually on 1 October. Some tables below show amounts from April 2024.

A positive adjustment is made if AWE increases between two indexation days, and there is no negative adjustment to be offset. The indexation factor applied to a positive adjustment will always be greater than 1.000. If AWE falls between two indexation days, then a negative adjustment applies, and indexing will be deferred until the negative adjustment is fully offset by future positive adjustments. While a negative adjustment applies, an indexation factor of 1.000 is applied to AWE indexed amounts. This means the AWE indexed amounts are unchanged for that indexation day.

Published AWE series and applicable indexation factors for amounts annually indexed

ABS Series date	AWE ¹	Indexation Day	Indexation Factor
May 2022	2022.80	1 October 2022	1.036

May 2025	2266.30	1 October 2025	1.046
May 2026	2335.80	1 October 2026	1.031

1. Use AWE when first published and disregard any later revisions.

Section 9 of the Regulation explains the method for the annual AWE indexation factor. To work out a positive adjustment, the most recent AWE series prior to the indexation day is divided by the AWE series published from 12 months prior to this series. Then the indexation factor is rounded to 3 decimal places.

To calculate an annually AWE indexed amount, multiply the corresponding AWE indexed amount from the previous indexation day by the current indexation factor (greater than or equal to 1.000). Then round the result up to the nearest whole $10.

1. Use AWE when first published and disregard any later revisions.

Section 8 of the Regulation explains the method for the biannual AWE indexation factor. To work out a positive adjustment, the most recent AWE series prior to the indexation day is divided by the AWE series published for the period 6 months prior to this series. Then the indexation factor is rounded to 3 decimal places.

To calculate a biannually AWE indexed amount in sections 96, 97 or 103, multiply the corresponding AWE indexed amount from the previous indexation day by the current AWE indexation factor (greater than or equal to 1.000). For indexation days from 1 October 2023 onwards, round up the result to the nearest dollar.

Applicable adjustment factors for pre-Injury income amounts

Section 11 of the Regulation tells you how to work out the AWE adjustment factor for an amount of pre-injury income. These amounts are adjusted on a biannual basis. To make a positive adjustment, the most recent AWE series published prior to the adjustment day is divided by the AWE series published for the period 6 months prior to the adjustment day to determine an adjustment factor. The factor is worked out to three decimal places. An amount is AWE adjusted by multiplying an applicable factor by the pre-injury income amount on an adjustment day. The AWE adjusted pre-injury amount is then rounded up to the nearest dollar.

The applicable factor for an adjustment day may vary depending on the start date for a person's income replacement benefits under section 101 of the MAI Act. This will occur in circumstances where a negative adjustment, from a previous adjustment day, has not yet been fully offset for amounts with a given start date. An adjustment factor of one is applied to an amount if a negative adjustment applies.

The table shows the factor to be applied to an injured person's pre-injury income on an adjustment day for a given range of start dates for an income replacement payment.

Worked example of adjusting pre-injury weekly income across multiple adjustment days

Ray's pre-injury weekly income (PIWI) is $2,000. The start date for Ray's income replacement benefit entitlement is 1 September 2024.

On adjustment day 1 October 2024, the 1st adjustment factor (1.022) is applied to Ray's PIWI:

$$$2,000 \times 1.022 = $2,044$$

From the next complete payment week following 1 October 2024, this 1st adjusted PIWI ($2,044) is the PIWI now used as part of calculating Ray's income replacement benefits.

On adjustment day 1 April 2025, Ray's 1st adjusted PIWI ($2,044) is further adjusted by the 2nd adjustment factor:

$$$2,044 \times 1.016 = $2,076.71$$

$$\text{Rounded up to the nearest dollar} = $2,077$$

From the next complete payment week following 1 April 2025, this 2nd adjusted PIWI ($2,077) is the PIWI now used as part of calculating Ray's income replacement benefits.

This compounding of the PIWI with positive adjustment factors will continue for subsequent adjustments days and future calculations of income replacement benefits.
